About This Project

Spiritual Pilgrimage is a website and publication derived of images submitted online by participating members. Images were curated directly from a live folder and feed www.zine-club.org where they are randomly formatted for publication.

Typically, a pilgrimage is a search of spiritual significance, it is often a journey to a location of importance to a person's faith. For this project we are also examining a metaphorical journey into our own rituals, daily lives and spiritual experiences. Without a conscious effort to view the world rationally small coincidences or random occurrences can evoke strong emotional responses, what happens when we place importance on these occurrences? If we arrange a group of images with spiritual importance does the publication become a holy book?

The intention of this publication is not only to publish resent works, but to also highlight the process of independent art publishing, and its accessibility as a media that forms relationships and builds communities of discourse. By engaging both print and web the project has the potential to display all types of file formats, therefore creating a truly multi-media experience.

Curated, Organized and Presented by Sylvana dAngelo and Alex Grunenfelder.
